Italian Postcolonial Science Fiction: Ubaldo Ragona and Sidney Salkow’s The Last Man on Earth (1964)

This paper analyzes Ubaldo Ragona and Sidney Salkow’s The Last Man on Earth (1964), and it shows that the representation of the zombie/vampire in this movie captures a moment of transition and the ambiguous status of Italy as a neo- and postcolonial nation, but also as a country with strong political and economic ties with the United States.

Simone Brioni is Assistant Professor at the Department of Cultural Studies and Comparative Literature, Stony Brook University. Using postcolonial theory, his work analyses the literary and cinematographic representation of migrations and Italian colonialism. His articles have been published in edited volumes and peer-reviewed journals including Altreitalie, Cinergie, Écritures, Incontri, Science Fiction Studies, Studi Culturali, and The Journal of Italian Cinema and Media Studies. His most recent publication is the monograph The Somali Within: Language, Race and Belonging in ‘Minor’ Italian Literature (Oxford: Legenda, 2015).

Nevermind the Gap: The Short Fiction of Judith Merril

While Judith Merril was, perhaps, best known for her editing and criticism, she contributed a substantial body of short science fiction. One of the features of Merril’s short fiction is her commitment to break down norms, barriers, and boundaries. Calvin will examine four areas or ways in which Merril challenges the boundaries or barriers between ideas, including science, nation, gender, and literary tradition.

Ritchie Calvin is Associate Professor in Women’s Gender & Sexuality Studies. His is the author of Feminist Science Fiction and Feminist Epistemology: Four Modes (Studies in Global Science Fiction). His work has appeared in several journals including Science Fiction Studies, Extrapolation, Femspec, and Utopian Studies. His edited volumes include: Gilmore Girls and the Politics of Identity: Essays on Family and Feminism in the Television Series; SF 101: A Guide to Teaching and Studying Science Fiction and The Merrill Theory of Lit’ry Criticism: Judith Merril’s Nonfiction (with Judith Merril).
