“Sovereignty Disavowed:

Tupac Amaru in the Atlantic World”

This talk offers new evidence of the repercussions of the Andean insurrection of 1780-1783 around the Atlantic world, and an explanation for the invisibility of that experience in the historiography of the Age of Revolution.

Sinclair Thomson is Associate Professor of History at New York University. He is the author of We Alone Will Rule: Native Andean Politics in the Age of Insurgency and co-author (with Forrest Hylton) of Revolutionary Horizons: Past and Present in Bolivian History.

Monday, April 11th    4:00pm

N-320; SBS Building

Refreshments served