agenda:

1:30 Paul Gootenberg, Stony Brook University - Introductory remarks
1:45 Dolors Armenteras & Nelly Rodriguez, Universidad Nacional de Colombia - Have the illicit crops changed our tropical landscapes? An overlook of the land use dynamics in NW Amazonia.
2:15 Diana Bocarejo, Universidad del Rosario, Colombia - Alternative approaches to forced eradication: State formation, Sovereignty, and Legal Subjects.
2:45 Adriana Bejarano, University of South Carolina - The hidden environmental costs of illicit crop cultivation in Colombia: an overview.
3:15 Daniel M. Rico, University of Maryland - The paradox of coca cultivation on the Colombian Pacific Coast: More Efforts and More Coca?
3:45 coffee break
4:00 Jennifer S. Holmes, Denis J. Dean, University of Texas at Dallas & Liliana M. Dávalos, Stony Brook University - The geographical signature of aerial eradication: how effective has the eradication program been?
4:30 H. Leonardo Correa, United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, Colombia - The coca growing region: Change and stability.
5:00 Maria-Clara Torres, Stony Brook University - Coca and state formation in Putumayo (Colombia).
5:30 Liliana M. Dávalos - Concluding remarks
5:45 reception

April 3, 2013

@ Latin American & Caribbean Studies Center
Social & Behavioral Sciences Bldg., Room N318

Sponsored by Stony Brook’s FAHSS (Faculty in the Arts, Humanities and lettered Social Sciences), a Research and Interdisciplinary Initiatives Fund supported by the Offices of the Provost, Vice President for Research, and the Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Stony Brook University.