Deadlines extended to November 1, 2015

Health Internship in Madagascar
While based at Centre ValBio research station overlooking the rainforest and the rapids of the Namarona River, participants can work on an experiential learning project with experts in environmental arts, health care, conservation education, IT and engineering, water and climate, or herpetology.
Program Dates: January 1-22, 2016

Italian Studies in Rome
The course offers students an understanding of Italian history, politics, and culture. In conjunction with classes, visits will be made to the city’s artistic and historical landmarks such as St. Peter’s Cathedral, the Coliseum, and Piazza di Spagna, as well as an excursion to the Renaissance city of Florence.
Program Dates: January 1-18, 2016

Tropical Marine Ecology in Jamaica
This program familiarizes students with the organisms (invertebrates, fishes and algae) and habitats (coral reefs, sea grass meadows and mangrove forests) within tropical marine coral reef ecosystems. The course consists of formal lectures, demonstrations, instructor-led field trips and involves snorkeling, reef walking and underwater photography.
Program Dates: January 9-22, 2016

Sustainability & Renewable Energy in Costa Rica
Students will learn about renewable energy, waste, and various organic and sustainable farming methods at the Punta Mona Center for Regenerative Design and Botanical Studies. Participants will tour the renewable energy facilities of two ecovillages, visit Puerto Viejo, the Bri-Bri Indigenous Reservation, Chocolate House and the Jaguar Rescue Center.
Program Dates: January 1-19, 2016

History in Ireland
Students will begin their exploration in Galway, then heading to the site of one of the first English Plantations – Kilkenny. The trip wraps up in Dublin, the capital of this flourishing nation. Day trips will include visiting the Cliffs of Moher, Connemara, Waterford and Belfast! Through visits to cliffs and castles, cathedrals and tombs, fortresses and museums, mountains and more, students will explore the vibrant history and culture of Ireland.
