

Outcomes of Bachelor's Degree Recipients

Stony Brook University collects information about its graduates in a variety of ways to report data to the National Association of Colleges and Employers (NACE) as well as provide to consumer information. To ensure data are comparable and collected with some rigor, rates for employment and continuing education as well as salary data are reported from a survey of alumni from 2014-15, conducted in fall 2016. The response rate to this survey was 16% for bachelor's recipients; data are grouped to provide meaningful statistics and rely on multi-year averages where cell sizes are small. The list of employment and graduate school destinations and geographic locations uses a broader environmental scan including records from LinkedIn, the National Student Clearinghouse, Web searches, and university enrollment and employment databases.
