HOW TO READ FAST, EFFECTIVELY, AND PURPOSEFULLY
(A READING-TO-WRITING CONNECTION WORKSHOP/WEBINAR FOR GRAD STUDENTS)

The MIC & PWR Writing Workshop & Webinar Series
WORKSHOP/WEBINAR 1 (2019-20)

Workshop: Wednesday, September 25, 2019, 1.00-2.20 pm
Webinar: Thursday, September 26, 2019, 7-8.15pm (meet.google.com/zkc-ejan-oaq)
(Note: Onsite workshops include group activities, while webinars use individual exercises.)

Place: Social & Behavioral Sciences Building (SBS), Room S147 (MIC)

As graduate students, you must often read hundreds of pages per week, scanning for what you need, skimming for grasping the main idea, and reading some texts more slowly than others. You must use different kinds of reading skills while searching and selecting texts, organizing and prioritizing them, and responding to them for developing your research agenda in relation to the scholarship in your field. And you must develop a variety of skills to make productive reading-to-writing connections. This workshop provides practical exercises/discussions on reading faster, more effectively, and more purposefully in the context of research and writing, publication and communication in graduate school. International students might find this workshop/webinar particularly useful but all students are welcome!

Presenter
Shyam Sharma is associate professor and Graduate Program Director at the Writing Program, whose research and teaching focus on graduate-level writing and international students in his research and teaching.

Co-sponsored by Graduate Student Organization  Lunch will be provided!

The Center for Multilingual & Intercultural Communication (MIC) is an interdisciplinary research center where scholars of linguistics, psychology, communication, education, and allied disciplines explore multilingual repertoires as resources in the context of global mobility and technological advancement. stonybrook.edu/mic. The Program in Writing and Rhetoric teaches foundational, elective, and graduate-level writing and communication skills to students across the university https://www.stonybrook.edu/commcms/writrhet/